Social Service A Remedy With

Speech Under Suffrage Auspices Full Of Splendid Thought

Social Service was the topic upon which the Hon. Benjamin Levine, judge of the common pleas court of Cleveland, spoke before a fair sized audience Tuesday evening at the headquarters of the chamber of commerce.

The excessive heat probably prevented many people from attending the lecture, but those who braved the sweltering weather were more than repaid with the wealth of thought presented in the short, interesting talk given by the speaker, who was brought here under the auspices of the recently formed Woman Suffrage organization of this city.

Judge Levine spoke of the transition in recent years from the individualistic state of civilization to the socialized state where each member of society realizes his dependence upon the other members. Where in earlier times if a crime were committed or a wrong done the offender received punishment, but no steps were taken toward reform, the tendency now is for society as a whole to remove the surroundings that tend to make criminals.

He referred to the public schools as an important factor in social service if they were universally opened to the people outside of school hours for places of meeting for entertainments, recreation, etc.

"The socialized view-point enables people to think in community terms," said Judge Levine. "Had European nations acquired the socialized view-point there would have been no war in Europe, for their difficulties would have been arbitrated in the best interests of the largest number."

The speaker stated that following the European war the nations of the world would look upon America as an example from which to model their plans of reconstruction. "And," said he, "what America needs is a return to the real American spirit, which is to live and believe in the great principles of our government, principles which the founders of our nation pledged themselves to support with their fortunes, their lives and their most sacred honor."

Judge Levine contrasted this pledge with one recently circulated in many localities forbidding enlistment in armies or navies for either offensive or defensive purposes. Such an attitude was condemned as un-American in spirit and as opposed to social service in its larger sense.

With regards to the question of giving the ballot to women the speaker advised women desiring the vote to have a program of social service which they could carry out with the ballot and with a definite idea of what they wished to accomplish by voting he said that their cause would gain many friends.

In connection with social service work in Cleveland Judge Levine gave an interesting account of 50 young men brought before the police judge for minor offenses. In previous instances it had been the custom for offenders in like cases to receive workhouse sentences. "From which they usually graduated to the penitentiary," said the speaker.

For the experiment fifty young men, arrested upon charges punishable with workhouse sentences, were given their choice of going to the workhouse for one month or attending night school for one year. All chose the night school and of the fifty only one ever appeared to answer for a crime after having received the opportunity offered by attending the school. Before the experiment was made about sixty per cent were arrested for second offenses and many for third and fourth.

In concluding his speech Judge Levine stated that before the advance of social service wrongdoing must recede and civilization will reach a higher plane than ever before in the history of mankind.

POSSIBILITY

OF U. S. WITHOUT A PRESIDENT
WORRIES FESS

Introduces Amendment Making Provision for Reconvention of Electoral College in Such a Contingency

Washington, July 19.—There is a remote contingency that the United States may be without a president next year, owing to a hiatus in laws covering the executive office.

According to Dr. Fess, representative from Ohio, the electoral college ceases to exist on the second Monday of January following a presidential election. If both the president-elect and the vice president-elect should die between then and March 4, inauguration day, there would be no one to take the presidency on March 4, in the opinion of Dr. Fess, because the present law of presidential succession applies only when an incumbent president and incumbent vice president are removed.

An amendment introduced by Dr. Fess follows:

"Provided, further, That in case of removal of both president and vice president elect prior to the 4th of March following the election, congress shall reconvene the presidential electors for the purpose of choosing a president and vice president."

Your Boy Is Far From Stupid If He Can Do This Test

With a pencil make a dot over any one of these letters F G H I J, and a comma after the longest of these three words; boy mother girl. Then, if Christmas comes in March, make a cross right here..... but if not pass along to the next question, and tell where the sun rises..... If you believe Edison discovered America, cross out what you just wrote, but if it was some one else, put in a number to complete this sentence: "A horse has.....feet." Write yes, no matter whether China is in Africa or not..... and then give a wrong answer to this question: "How many days are there in the week?..... Write any letter except g just after this comma, and then write no if 2 times 5 are 10..... Now if Tuesday comes after Monday, make two crosses here....; but if not, make a circle here....or else a square here.... Be sure to make three crosses between these two names of boys: George.....Henry. Notice these two numbers: 3, 5. If iron is heavier than water, write the larger number here...., but if iron is lighter write the smaller number here.... Show by a cross when the nights are longer: in summer?..... in winter?..... Give the correct answer to this question: "Does water run uphill?..... and repeat your answer here..... Do nothing here (5 plus 7 equals.....), unless you skipped the preceding question; but write the first letter of your first name and the last letter of your last name at the end of this line:

The above is given by the Journal of Heredity as a test of mentality. Anyone who can follow all the directions, accurately and without delay, is certainly not very low in the scale of intelligence. The normal boy can do it with reasonable accuracy, but the feeble-minded boy is usually hopelessly confused.

RUNAWAY SPENT TUESDAY NIGHT IN CHESTERVILLE

Lad Who Told Wild Story Week Ago
Springs Into Limelight—
Parents Unable to Control Him

The police were asked Tuesday to look for a young boy residing in the north end of the city, who failed to return to his home Monday evening after being sent to the grocery with a small amount of money.

The lad seems to have a penchant for running away and remaining away from home for several days and recently was found by the police sleeping in an automobile late at night. At that time he told a wild tale of having been locked out of his home and being unable to find his parents.

Monday evening his mother gave the child some money and sent him to the grocery to make some purchases. When he failed to return the police were asked to assist in finding him, and Wednesday forenoon Officer Hough met him on West High Street and took him into custody.

The boy, who is only ten years old, told the officer that he had been to Chesterville and had just returned to Mt. Vernon.

He was given a severe lecture and sent home.

The soothing and healing balsams open the clogged air passages and in a short time you get relief and start on the road to recovery. Your nose stops running, you cough less and you are getting better. Get a bottle, use as directed. Keep what is left as a cough and cold insurance.
